Art saved my life — twice.

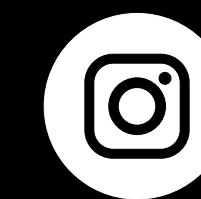

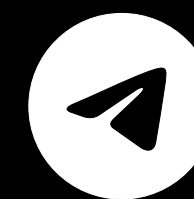

I have always had a passion to create. Whether it is art, music drama or storytelling it doesn't matter. As long as I am creating I am in a happy place. Art saved my life the first time in high school, after my freshman year and no art activities in school, I was drowning. We moved to a new town with new possibilities and a fantastic arts program. The second time was after severe septic shock. I spent much of my therapy focused on creating.

I have spent 30+ years working in the graphic and instructional design arenas for companies like, Disney, Apple, Microsoft, and T-Mobile. With this background in design, I started down a new path.

My subjects are simple, whimsical expressions of animals and flowers that use a diorama of layers and custom patterns that create dimension to tell a story with heart. I have named my style - Whimsical Digital Collage.

I live in the Pacific northwest where inspiration is a way of life. My support team is my husband, family, friends and my Bichonpoo -Snickerdoodle.

Stars Shining Bright Above You

Explore the celestial wonders of the galaxy

Written and Illustrated by Susan Straub-Martin
Astrophotography and Research by Timothy Straub Ph.D.

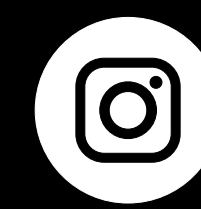

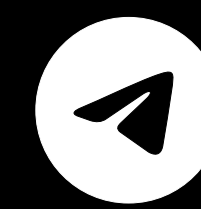

"When the star starts to grow up, and the stellar winds blow away the dust, leftover matter that orbits the new star begins to form planets. They think that this is how our Solar System began. Astronomers take pictures of them so we can see how pretty they are," said Frosty.
"They look magical," said Poppy.

Facts: The Horsehead and Flame nebulae are part of the Orion Molecular Cloud, an active star forming region that includes the great Orion Nebula. With a proper nebula filter, these objects stand out from the neighboring stars in the region. These nebulae are about 1,375 light years from Earth.
